Who We Are

We-R-911 is a community committed to supporting veterans and first responders as they navigate post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and related injuries. Whether diagnosed or undiagnosed, our group provides a safe space to share with peers who understand the journey.

Our members include firefighters, law enforcement officers, disaster responders, members of clergy, corrections services employees, tow truck operators, emergency dispatchers among others.

What We Offer

Undersanding & Acceptance

At We-R-911, we empathize with veterans and first responders' unique challenges, offering unparalleled support from members who share similar backgrounds.

Impartial Environment

Our space ensures open sharing without judgment or stigma. Regardless of your recovery stage or journey origin, you'll find acceptance among our diverse membership.

Peer Support

Connect with peers, share insights, and form meaningful bonds in our meetings.

Coping Strategies

Beyond storytelling, members share valuable resources and tools that aid others in their recovery journey.

Sense of Belonging

Find a supportive community at We-R-911, where authenticity, encouragement, and hope flourish.

What We Do

We-R-911 group meetings take place weekly on Zoom and are guided by a trained para-professional to ensure a safe format is maintained. Members come together to share their experiences, offer support, and learn from one another from the privacy and security of a place they feel safe and open to share.

We talk about our week. We share our victories and our setbacks. Most importantly though, we heal together. While this is not therapy, many find the experience therapeutic.
